Hooks & Eyes:

Introductory Price held until 7th April

First of all, thank you to everyone who has bought a copy of Hooks & Eyes and particularly to those of you who have left reviews. I really appreciate it. I can't say I'm on the best sellers list yet, but at the time of writing the book was in the top 50 in several categories on Amazon in the US and in one category in the UK.

As I am still running a few promotions, I have decided to hold the eBook price at 99p / 99c for the rest of this week. If you haven't bought your copy yet, why not take this chance before the price increases? For further details click here.

I'm delighted that Hooks & Eyes has been awarded a GOLD Quality Mark by Books Go Social. The award is based on computer analysis of the text for readability as well as a personal review by one of their editors. I was particularly pleased with the last sentence of their report which stated:

"The story is well constructed with strong characters and an interesting storyline and is deserving of a gold standard."

Read Self Published Month

In a change to the usual format, this month I'm supporting Read Self Published. This event is being used to showcase self-published authors using a variety of online events throughout April.

The Teacher:

A short mystery that accompanies the Penny Green series.

London 1881. A young teacher dies at a school just weeks after her sister. A tragic coincidence or something more sinister?

Fleet Street reporter Penny Green is suspicious but nothing suggests the sisters have been murdered. She risks taking matters into her own hands. But the risk might be a step too far.

Competition Winners

For those of you who signed up to the newsletter via my website, the draw has now been made to find the winners of the five signed copies of the paperback edition of Hooks & Eyes. The winners have been notified. Please check your spam/junk folder in case the notification has been filtered.

For those of you who didn't win, the paperback version of the book will be available later this month.

If you know of anyone else who would be interested in the books, please ask them to visit valmcbeath.com and sign up for the newsletter.

See you again next month
